Medical Support

The Child Support Enforcement Agency is responsible for establishing and enforcing health insurance orders for child support cases when coverage is available and reasonable or expected to become available.

The employer will get a notice to enroll the employee and a copy of the child support order requiring the employee to get health insurance for the child(ren). The employer must enroll the child(ren) and deduct any premiums from the employee's wages. This order may be in addition to an order to withhold income for child support.

The dependent(s) must be enrolled in the insurance plan without regard to seasonal restrictions (i.e. Open Enrollment). The dependant(s) may not be denied coverage on the grounds that the parents were not married, that the dependant is not claimed as a dependant on the employee's federal income tax return, or the dependant does not reside with the employee or in the insurer's service area.
